Why this was not done when the Chamber recommended it fifteen years ago is a mystery, but strong as Quadrille. was the necessity then it is infinitely ...stronger now, in view of the uncertainty attending the future of the Mexican dollar. Hard as it is to get the home Government to move, they cannot remain insensible to the arguments which have now been adduced. As matters stand at present it would be possible for Mexico, by giving an artificial value to her dollar, to impose a very serious tax on the trade of China and of this Colony. In connection with the question of coinage of a British dollar for the Far East it may be useful as well as interesting to reproduce some of the correspondence that took place when payment of one per cent, has not remunerated in these quarters. 3.—I believe that in the word sometimes in the preceding paragrap's lies the key to the whole s tuation. Exceptional circumstances have ouessionally forced up the price of the Mexican dollar, and then it might have been profitable for a time to be coining a British dollar. But the very issue, in large quantities, of such dollar, would tend to lower the market value of the Mexican, and then the state of things which made the issue of the British dollar profitable would dis ppear at once, and with thom th profit on the dollar.

4.-It must be remembered that a mint cannot be started to work only sometimes. It was the want of continuous work, amongst other things, which told so heavily against the Hongkong all the year round ... The question is, can it be so coined without most serious loss? To which I conceive there is but one snawer, and that a ne-

5.—I enclose an exhaustive report framed by a Board of Enquiry to which the question of the Boogkong Mint was referred by Governor Sir. Richard Mandonnell. This Report, I consider, effectively disposes of the question of profitable competition with the Maxican dollar. At the very outset, how ver, a sentence occurs which will be very misicading unless the exact mean. ing the Commissioners had in mind in framing it be carefully remembered. They say, (answer to let question). "It is pracioable at comparatively moderate cost to increase the melting and coining power of the mint so as to just now that we had $20,000 when we last supplied with silver." That is to ear, if the mint met and I should like to know how it has been can be kept in full and continuous work, coining dollars at two per cent, seignorage, it will pay. So that the sentence I have quoted amounts to very much the same thing as eaving that a shop would pay if only a steady atream of customers could be attracted to buy goods at a beary science --

What the commissioners in their minds was a question of gear and machinery as to which there had been difficulties The Mint can be made to turn out enough coin," they say, " if only you can attract silver." The whole of the rest of the report goes to show why silver cannot be attracted."

6. - Except in the deplorable over-appreciation f gold, the situation has altered little since the Report in question was written We do, however. possess full information on one point as to which the Commissioners were in the dark. We know how much subsidiary coin this Colony can be safely expected to absorb in the course of a year. During the last few years liberal supplies have been obtained from bome, and the coins have been put at the disponal of any one who chooses to ask for them. The result is that they do not move off at a greater rate than $300,000 a yer the profit on which may be taken as $15,000. hat is a very little, when the loss on coining a dollar is taken into account. (7-8.)-The greater part of these subsidiary coins find their way to the adjacent mainland. where, ouriously enough, a coinage bearing the Queen's head is very popular. I am told that Hongkong ten-cent pieces may be found in almost every shop of any pretonsions in Canton, and even many miles toland. It may perhaps be Manager's expenses, were $2218; assay apparatus argued that, if Chinese will take token coins which they know to be considerably alloy d. and will even pay a premium for them, they would equally take dollars, the intrinsic value of which is not quite equal to the value at which it is desired to organiste them, Such reasoning, however, would be fallecions. Chinese take ten and five-cent pieces, and even buy them up. for the sake o their convenience, just as a tradesman at home will give a small premium for a supply of copper. But no Chinese would receive any considerable sum in this coinage, any more than the English tradesman would accept £500 in penny pieces. For all substantial perposes cole, to a Chinese can never represent more than a certain weigh of such and such a finences. 9.—The writer of the pamphlet The British Dollar paively proposes to make that dollar pay by putting two per cent, less silver into it than the Mexican dollar cortains. Devices of this kind are simply attempte to run away from one's shadow. Such a coin might do perfectly well for local circulation in Hongkong and the Straits Settlements, if that were all that is to be thought of, but when we come to consider the purchasing power of the two dollars butside of those Colonies it is evident that the Maxican dollar would be at two per cent. premium, or the British dollar at this point I have no data on which to base an tion, for directly specie might be required beyou dat once be at a discount. 10 -Let it be supposed however, that the de-

THE COLONIAL TREASURER, HONGE ING. The Imperial Mints, Osaka, Japan,

9th August, 1886. Bir.-In reply to your letter of the 17th ult. have much pleasure in sauding-you the following remarks on the coinage of a dollar coin and by the same post the last five annual reports of the Imperial Mint.

In the reports I think you will find the in formation you require respecting the sunus coinage receipts and expenses of the Mint. Mint, however, in Singapore would be of an entirely different character and have different functions. The Japanese Mint has had to provide say thirty six millions of people with a large minor carrency of capper and silver in addition to the standard coins, and from this minor ourrency, and this alone, especially from the coinage of copper, the profits have been and are derived

The actual cost of coining the silver yen is greater than the charge—one per cent.—made to the public for coining it, but the object is issuing this coin is not to bring direct profit to the Mint, but to bonefit the country indirectly by the facilities a satisfactory currency gives to A Mint in Singapore would probably be chiefly engaged in coining dollars, as it is improbable that a circulation would be found for a large anunal coinege of subsidiary silver, and in such case it is difficult to see how if could avoid being a heavy expense to the Colony, unless its charge for coining dollars was higher than the banks or other importers of bullion would be prepared to Government appears to have arrived at the con-

In the Japanese Mint the cost of coining the silver yen exceeds one and a half per cent. even log that drawing on its own malancholy exwhen only a portion of the appendent of management is charged to its account. In Singapore the cost of coining a dollar would perhaps reach. probably exceed two per cent. As the cost of dollar to these Sattlements, the Chamber never have, &c., coining a similar coin in the other Mints may be contemplated a scheme, which proved so disasof interest to you, I insert here extracts from the trons in Hongkour, and it is noncessary therereports of the London and the United States fore further to allude to the powerful arguments To the Hop. the Colonial Secretary, Straits

From these quotations you will see that the onst of coming a dollar in the above mentioned. inia, where the conditions are more favourable than would be found in Singapore, varies from one and a quarter to about one and a half per cent. There is also another point of considerable importance in connexion with a Colonial wint a Asia which may be mentioned here. Such a Mint would probably not have a greater canacity reliable. than forty thousand dollars per working day, out during the China season -if I may judge from what happens here bullion is received sometimes at the rate of nearly a million dollars in a week, the importers have to be paid ay within eight or ten days-actually on the sixth the payment of a small fixed additional charge and it is impossible to coin this amount within the time allowed for payment, consequently a-reserve of coins has to be kept to must such In the Japanese Mint we find it necessary to have over two and a half millions of silver wens in Osaka ready for delivery. This is considered a part of the Government reserve, and for its use the Mint pays no interest. Besides this the Government reserves in Tokyo can be drawn upon in cases of emergency. In Singapore it dellars involves a heavy loss upon the State. might be difficult for the Colonial Government to arrange satisfactorily for such a reserve free of interest, and without it the Mint might be intendence of less skilled and experienced as mitted to the Secretary of State, the Directors

As an example of this I may state that during

If this is impossible, the Colony must be pre. pared for a somewhat heavy annual expenditure; It may; however, be possible that the indirect benefit which the establishment of a vint may

Sir,-I have the honour to acknowledge recept of your 8099/36 of 9th instant, having further reference to the question of the introduction of a British dollar into these Settlements. With respect to the Hongkong correspondence which you were good enough to forward in yours of 24th September, I am to state that, however valuable and interesting the information contained therein, it would appear to leave untouched the chief arguments advanced by the Chamber. It is now, however, proposed to displace (gradually but eventually) the whole of that currency and to substitute for it an entirely new circulating medium, which, whatever its intrinsic advantages, cannot but prove more burdensom; to the trade of the Colony, because, whoever may in the first instance pay the expense of the new columne, it is perfectly certain that eventually the entire cost will fall upon and have to be borne by the trade which absorbs the carrency. misapprehangion appeared to exist amongst the everybody's month here when I arrived on Russell, replying to Sir Saymour King, said the H. & K.
